Summary: (machine translated)
The Fontanella canyon is a little known and frequented descent in the Alt Urgell. It is a very well defined canyon and divided into two sections, the upper part consists of a chain of rappels with a minimum flow and crystal clear water where we can see newts, the lower part is completely dry and with some narrow and spectacular formations. Descent only rappels, highlighting the penultimate, marmite trap 3 meters deep. Ideal canyon for self-rescue courses and rope maneuver training.

Hydrology: (machine translated)

1 Car: on the C14 from Organyá towards La Seu d'Urgell, park on the esplanade at km 166.
2 Cars: the first at km 166. The second one take the track that leaves 300m before on the left. Follow it through the zig-zags up to the fork of a private road on the right. Follow this road until you reach a chain.

Approach: (machine translated)
With only one car you have to go up the track to the area of the chain.
From the chain we follow the path to the riverbed and on the orographic right we walk until we find the corridor.

Tour: (machine translated)
A first part with some water (watch out for newts in the pools and pools), followed by a second part drier and continuous rappels.

Return: (machine translated)
We follow the riverbed for 5 minutes until we find a path that crosses the riverbed. We take it to the right and soon we reach the road.
