Summary: (machine translated)
Simple torrent to descend in the rainy season to carry a good flow. All rappels are from natural, in the middle of this wonderful forest and ends the descent in the Riera d'Ogassa, ideal to continue the descent to the exit to El Negre. Here we will review only the part of the Freixe, to continue with the Riera will take another 2 hours of descent.
There are several colleagues who have told us that if we are going to park at the Alberge El Negre we should ask for permission, respect that it is a rest area and that we should spend money to compensate for the inconvenience.
You know! ;)

Hydrology: (machine translated)
There are trails that cross the riverbed almost all along the route.

Access: (machine translated)
From Ripoll to Sant Joan de les Abadesses on the N260, at pk 111.5 past the restaurant Rama, we have two left-right curves on the stream and a track on the left that climbs to the Serra de Sant Amand.
We will go up this track for more than 6kms until the detour of "el Negre", we will take it and we will go down there to leave the car to return if we are going to do the Riera as well.
With the access car or if we only go to Freixe we will return to the track and follow it until the Ermita de San Martí d'Ogassa.

Approach: (machine translated)
Font Freixe and Riera d'Ogassa Accesses
We go back 100m from the hermitage to the riverbed.

Tour: (machine translated)
A first part without interest that we could avoid by the track, after the junction with it would come the most entertaining part, a multitude of small natural abseilings and rappels to the confluence with the Riera.

Return: (machine translated)
Shortly before reaching the stream we have a path on the right that goes up the riverbed on the orographic right and crosses the riverbed again to go to the aforementioned track.
