Summary:

It is a “technical” route, with rope rubs to manage and several deviations, and fairly aquatic. In spring it is usually impassable due to excessive flow caused by snowmelt. The water is also cold because the canyon lies at about 1500 m a.s.l., and the second section is quite enclosed. For this reason, it is recommended to do it in the summer months. The lower section is the most interesting, both in terms of scenery and verticals.
