Summary: (machine translated)
Aquatic rappel canyon

Hydrology:

Access: (machine translated)
On probably the fastest way to the Sierra de Guara - from Toulouse through the tunnel of Bielsa to Ainsa and Barbastro - is Bielsa shortly after the Spanish border.\nOn the onward journey we see 4 km south of the end of the town - the road here runs along the left bank of the Rio Cinca - on the left (east) a waterfall with a small parking bay on the side of the road. 500 m further, before the next bridge over the Rio Cinca, turn onto a small gravel road on the left bank and continue downstream for 200 m; park here by remains of an old bridge.

Approach: (machine translated)
On foot follow the slope north up the slope. After 25 min. and about 50 m before a rightward haipin bend, a clearly visible path on the left (by a cairn) leads to the stream in 1 min. On the left bank go forward a bit until you reach a huge boulder (entry lower part).

Tour: (machine translated)
Due to the lack of great depth views, it is also recommended for those who are afraid of heights. 9-11 rappel in uninterrupted succession. In summer, the stream can probably dry up - like so many in the Spanish Pyrenees. Conversely, even a high water level should hardly cause really serious problems.

Return: (machine translated)
After the last waterfall on the path first right then left bank to the road, along this back to the car.
