Summary: (machine translated)
Also known as Calderas de Neila is an idyllic place, well known by hikers in the area. They are a series of small waterfalls embedded between blocks of conglomerate that give it a unique appearance. The waterfalls do not have great entity but the environment does. Better to do it in late spring or early summer to ensure a good flow and not freeze.

Hydrology: (machine translated)
Along the path that runs through it

Access: (machine translated)
We will have to get to Quintanar de la Sierra by the N234 from Burgos to Salas de los Infantes and then the CL117.
From Soria to Abejar to take the CL117 to Molinos del Duero and continue to Quintanar.
Once in the village, we must look for a track that goes north along the forest track "Juega los Bolos". We will follow the whole track until the end, there we have a parking area.

Approach: (machine translated)
From the same parking a path heading west, almost no slope, which we will follow for 2.5 kilometers. Here, just at the curve of the track, there is a small path heading north that gradually turns left to get into the head of the boilers.

Tour:
Ver topo.

Return: (machine translated)
After the last rappel we go left following the cairns to the track where we turn off. We retrace the access road.
