Summary: (machine translated)
Interesting canyon if you catch it after rains in its final part where we have two rappels of 27 and 41m. In summer with the low water it loses a lot

Hydrology: (machine translated)
At almost all times

Access: (machine translated)
On the N230 between Pont de Suert and Vielha. At pk 138 we have the small town of Bono where we will park.

Approach: (machine translated)
From the back of the village there is a path that goes up the river on the orographic right. We will go up it always quite close to the riverbed and we can enter in the second part (where the waterfalls are) or in the upper part (in the area arrampada) which is accessed from a tributary.

Tour: (machine translated)
The first part of the route is not very fun, with rappels that are not very steep, most of which we will be able to negotiate. The rest we will have to improvise with natural ones.
The second part is much more interesting, it gains entity and ends with the rappels of 27 and 41m so you could do only this part and shorten...

Return: (machine translated)
You are almost to the village

Coordinates:
