Summary: (machine translated)
Collector's canyon, aesthetically it is beautiful, but it is very short.

Hydrology: (machine translated)
No leaks in the boxed area

Access: (machine translated)
From Torralba del Pinar we take the track that goes to the Santa Barbara fountain, pass the sports center and turn right onto a dirt track towards the ravine.

Approach: (machine translated)
From the parking we go in the direction of the ravine by a poorly defined but well intuited path, we soon see the ravine and we get into the riverbed.

Tour: (machine translated)
The beginning is simply walking along the bed of the ravine, immediately we see the first rappel R7m, boxed, the first pool usually has water and but it can be avoided with skill. Immediately there is an exposed cliff (R2), there is a plate on the left orographic high somewhat hidden to make a 6m cliff/rappel. Here it is no longer possible to avoid the water hole, it covers little. Immediately we have the next R6m that falls dry at the end of the gully.
It is best to do this after rainfall to catch the water from the pools clean.

Return: (machine translated)
After the last rappel we walk about 65m along the gully and we see the GR, we take the GR in a southeast direction going up the gully on the orographic right, immediately we see again an area where we can re-enter the gully (before the rappels), we will enter the gully and undo the approach path.
