Summary: (machine translated)
This canyon is generally dry except after rains and without great difficulties. An easy access by the access path to the peak through a magnificent beech forest make this canyon worthwhile in autumn.

Hydrology: (machine translated)
In the first part

Access: (machine translated)
We are located in Arguis. To do this by the A23 or the N330 from Huesca to Jaca we will leave Arguis.
Once in the village we will take the road to Bentué de Rasal and after a few kilometers, before passing the pass we will find a track on the left, from which we can perfectly see the Peiró peak and the ravine that we will descend.
After 250m there is a track on the right that we will take, it will make a sharp left turn and pass through the dry stream of the ravine, about 300m later we will find a small parking lot and some signs indicating the ascent to the peak.

Approach: (machine translated)
Along the marked path of the Peiró peak we will go up through its beautiful beech forest until we reach the riverbed, at the detour to Bolea.

Tour: (machine translated)
A first part without much grace and the second part more boxed and sporty in which we will find the 3 rappels, the first 2 rappels can be joined.

Return: (machine translated)
After the last rappel we will find the remains of a track on the right that leads us to the parking lot.
