Summary: (machine translated)
At the beginning vertical rappel canyon, then creek ladders.

Hydrology:

Access: (machine translated)
From Reutte/Tyrol we drive on the B 198 via Stanzach to Häselgehr (28.2 km each way from Lech bridge to Lech bridge). Directly after the Lech bridge we turn right and drive to the camping site "Rudi" (700 m). At the bridge over the Lahnbach we park our car at a suitable place.

Approach: (machine translated)
On foot or better yet by bike - if we want to limit ourselves to the uppermost part - we follow the forest road after the sign "Wasserfallenweg". After 2.8 km and some serpentines we see a narrow snow on the right with an old forest path that leads here from the Lochbach. Over this path we get off, if we want to walk only the attractive upper part. Consequently, we now park our bike here for the return trip. \nWe continue on the forest track. After a few hundred meters we come to a small clearing in the forest. Here we leave the track and look for the path that leads uphill on the north side of the clearing in the forest. We follow it until we come to a field of mountain pines on the right. Here we look for the somewhat hidden track that crosses into the slope and the mountain pine field. On this track we reach the stream (entry). Cf. also the trail sketch under "Photos".

Tour: (machine translated) first vertical first and attractive top part. Then the exit to the slope (bike). \nThen the middle part and finally the lowest, which can still offer a 25m rappel. At the end of the integral ascent the exit to the forest road.

Return: (machine translated)
On the forest road in a southerly direction to the car at "P2" (google trail sketch at "Photos").
