Access: (machine translated)
From Gap on the N85 - "Route Napoleon" - in the direction of Grenoble (northwards). After a good 15 km, turn right onto the D23, drive through Saint-Bonnet-en-Champsaur and about 8 km after this turn-off you will come to the houses in the hamlet of La Motte-en-Champsaur. Continue from here to Molines-en-Champsaur. After the houses, we park our car on the right-hand side of the road, as it is no longer permitted to continue here.

Approach: (machine translated)
We now follow the slope on foot for about 35 minutes (alternatively also possible by (e-)bike). Then we follow the signpost "Jas de Jartier". We ascend in serpentines, at an altitude of almost 1500m, a hiking trail walks in from the left. Further up, the path branches off (1580m altitude), we stay left. At an altitude of just over 1800m - we can now see the huts of Jas de Jartier and the Colombier waterfalls - we leave the path and cross into the streambed above the waterfalls.

Tour: (machine translated)
First some smaller steps, some of which are slippery. Then about 20 rappels, first in relatively open terrain, later more indented. The tour exits when we see the slope on the left.

Return: (machine translated)
On the slope back to the car.

Automatisch importiert von Descente-Canyon.com für Canyon Colombier La piste forestière a complètement été dévastée par les crues mais l'accès au canyon est facile. Avec un ISO 0 à 4000 ça fond fort et on ne peut plus passer dans l'actif quand il est concentré. On a du sortir pour aller repérer la deuxième partie car certains passages peuvent poser problème. On a pu finalement finir le canyon en posant deux lunules avec de la cordelette et en utilisant deux arbres pour faire des rappels hors d'eau : la grosse d'entrée où on a n'a pas trouvé de point mais qui est contournable et l'enchaînement des deux cascades avec virage ressaut trop en eau avec une main courante sanglier. On a aussi utilisé quelques arbres en travers pour faciliter des d'escalades actuellement sous l'eau. Une très belle journée dans ce vallon sauvage.
