Summary: (machine translated) Simple and short but interesting canyon next to Chisagüés. Generally we will find it dry so it is a good option for rainy days.
Hydrology: Posibles
Access: (machine translated) We have to go to Parzán, for this we arrive at Ainsa and take the A138 towards France. After passing Bielsa we arrive at Parzán and when we pass the village we will see the detour to the left to Chisagüés. We will take this road to the village. We have two options, follow the track with the car or park in Chisagüés and walk. We will follow the track for about 3kms to a bridge with a sharp left curve that then has another on the right, this is our ravine.
Approach: (machine translated) From the bridge it is immediate Tour: (machine translated) Natural descent, if we catch it with water, it is a very interesting descent.
Return: (machine translated) We will see a cairn on the left and a meadow with hedges. We will go up through the meadow to the track.
