Summary: (machine translated)
Short rappel canyon in tuff limestone with 7 abseiling points up to 30 meters, good alternative tour after rainfall.

Hydrology:

Access: (machine translated)
Coming from Innsbruck, take the highway E 45 at exit 32 (Kramsach) in the direction of Kramsach/Alpbachtal. Cross the Inn and at the next traffic circle take the fourth exit in the direction of Wörgl/Rattenberg. Follow the B 171 (Tiroler Straße) for 6.5 km, directly after the large St. Leonhard church there is a small parking lot with a picnic table on the left.

Approach: (machine translated)
On the other side of the road, pass the farm on the right and follow the tractor tracks straight ahead across the meadow to the edge of the forest (bench). A steep path starts here and leads through the forest to the entry point in 15 minutes. There is enough space here for a group to change clothes.

Tour: (machine translated)
The first rappel starts directly at the beginning from a tree on the right.
A total of seven abseils up to a height of 30 meters follow almost immediately after each other. Depending on the conditions, sling ropes were knotted around trees (without a maillon) or galvanized single pitons 10 mm each with a ring drilled into them. A little tree entanglement does not hinder progress. Afterwards there is a little downclimbing in the forest canyon.

Return: (machine translated)
After the seventh rappel, follow the course of the stream for about 100 meters, after a striking left-right bend, exit to the right onto the meadows. A few meters to the right to the bench and follow the tractor track downhill towards the farm and the car.

First ascent. That something like this still exists in 2024, a canyon visible from the road, short access and a few nice abseils in the forest. Born out of necessity (high water in all the other canyons nearby). Nice for half a day. (machine translated)
