Summary: (machine translated)
Rappel canyon, is usually climbed in conjunction with Viu de Llevata

Hydrology:
No

Access: (machine translated)
Same approach as Viu de Llevata: On the N 260 (the Spanish 'transalpine road' of the Pyrenees) from Pobla di Segur in the direction of Pont de Suert, we reach the Col de Perves (1325 m above sea level) after 25 km via Senterada and a few kilometers later the village of Viu de Llevata, situated on a mountain ridge. You can park your car either on the meadow to the right of the road or on the hard shoulder of the N 260 after the saddle.

Approach: (machine translated)
Enter the village and then take a track to the left (heading NE) down to the Viu de Llevata stream. Where the path loses its border of trees and bushes, we come to a flat and bare ridge. Here we would descend in an easterly direction to the entry to the Viu de Llevata. However, we follow the path on the ridge downhill in a northerly direction. Before we come across vegetation (trees and bushes) again, the path heads west. We follow the path, cross the Viu de Llevata on an old stone bridge and continue along the path until we reach the plateau and see the Teixidor at the bottom left. A few more meters and we are at the entry point.

3 rappel: 12-10-34

Return: (machine translated)
Normally you descend further in Viu de Llevata (approx. 2.5 hours), so compare to the exit there. Before reaching the Viu de Llevata, you could also turn left up a clear path to the old stone bridge and follow the approach path back to the starting point. If you want to walk the Viu de LLevata from the top, leave the Teixidor at the path crossing, cross the Viu de LLevata gorge via the stone bridge and descend from the ridge on the path to the entry point.
