Summary: (machine translated)
Nice and little known canyon of the French Pyrenees with just enough equipment, slippery, full of vegetation (and logs) but that you have to do sometime. Access in an incomparable environment and return through lush forest. Better with a combination of cars

Hydrology: (machine translated)
In some areas to the left to take the path that goes down to the road.

Access: (machine translated)
You have to get to Gabas, at the foot of the Midi d'Ossau. From Pau by the N134 to Laruns and then by the D934 to Gabas. From Sallent de Gállego by the A136 we cross the Portalet and go down to Gabas.
Next to Gabas there is a road that goes up to Bioux Artigues, the D231. Halfway up, a stone house and an esplanade, on the left the return path. Here we leave the exit car.
With the access car we drive up to the lake and park as high as possible (in summer you have to get up early).

Approach: (machine translated)
From the parking lot of the Lac de Boius Artigues a path leaves towards the "Plateau du Magnabaigt", beginning in the forest and upon reaching the pass opens in a flat area that we cross and see the stream in front of us.

Tour: (machine translated)
The descent is not very busy, with limited or insufficient facilities, many natural rappels and very slippery like almost all of those in the area. The environment and the descent are worth the effort.

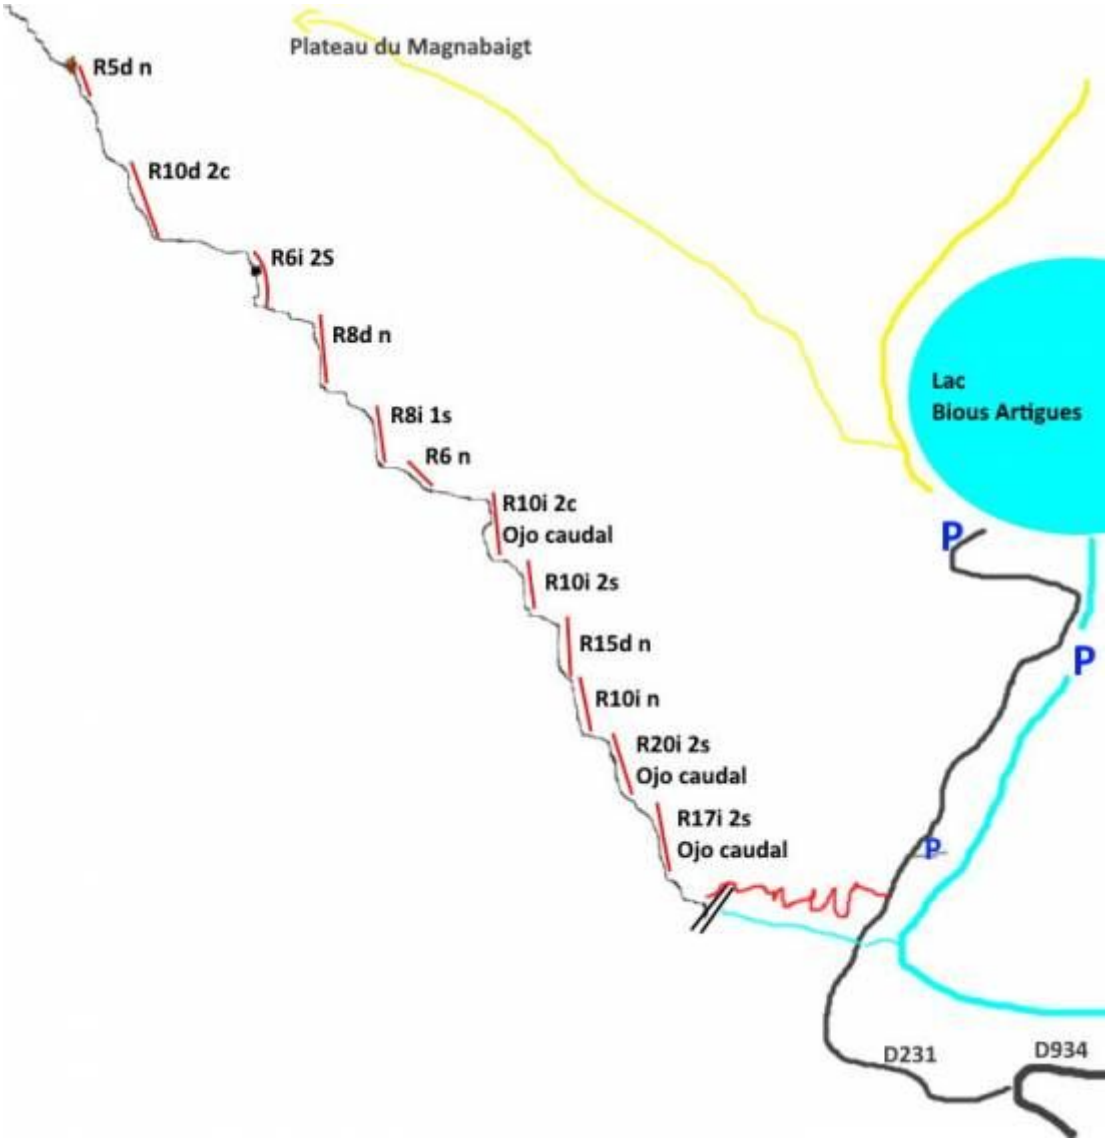

Return: (machine translated)
When you reach the water intake, turn right onto the path that leads down to the road.
