Summary: (machine translated)
Like its neighbor (caseta del Tou), it is an open canyon, dry, solitary and without great difficulty, it can be used for initiation and the most outstanding feature of the descent is its semi-flown rappel over the Cova del Miralles, after which we share the descent. Some emergence may force us to avoid pools.

Hydrology: (machine translated)
Yes, almost all the way, although a bit grassy, and the trail crosses the ravine several times.

Access: (machine translated)
We are located in Árnes, on the T330. We will enter by the side of Valderrobles (from the river) to take Aragon Street. After 200m we have a detour to the right to Toll de Vidre that we will take. By this track/road we will go towards the Coll de la Creu here a track comes out on our left, in quite bad condition and after 600m it goes down towards the Caseta de Rabosí where we will park.

Approach: (machine translated)
Access bcos Serrall de les Tossetes
From the Rabosí hut we will go down the track towards the Gros ravine, when we get down we follow it for about 50m and we will see a path that goes up to the Serrall de Tossetes, through the Racó de Pataqueret leaving the Cova del Fideu to one side. The path, a little lost, in which we will follow some milestones, leaves the bed of the ravine by its orographic right to climb the slope to almost the top, here, already horizontally goes to the head of the ravine of the Cova del Fideu and Tossetes, we will follow a little more to the next gully that the neighboring bco de la caseta del Tou and without leaving the path we will arrive at our ravine.

Tour: (machine translated)
A first part of longer rappels with the third one over the Miralles cave, a nice semi-flown rappel. Then comes the confluence with the Bco de la Caseta de Tou, with shorter rappels.

Return: (machine translated)
When we reach the Gros ravine, we will follow the path that goes up to the access path.
