Summary: (machine translated)
Also known as Hereishedo, Anhera or Anyere ravine. It is a beautiful ravine next to the tunnel of Vielha little frequented because in spring it has snow and in summer it dries up. Difficult to access, with no marked path.

Hydrology: (machine translated)
Difficult but possible because of the slopes... be very careful because the slope is quite slippery.

Access: (machine translated)
We have to place ourselves in Vielha
From Vielha going up to the tunnel, just before the sharp left turn there is a track on the right to the Borda Sabater. We park at the borda just at the exit of the ravine.

Approach: (machine translated)
We will go up the orographic left side of the stream through the forest without a defined path up to about 1630m.

Tour: (machine translated)
This is a descent full of natural features in a spectacular alpine environment. It is quite abandoned and some anchors may have jumped so you will have to improvise natural

Return: (machine translated)
You can exit to the left to go down to the trail without finishing the descent of the creek.
