Summary: (machine translated)

Short and relatively open gorge, south-east facing; something for collectors or as a complement to other canyons in the area.

Hydrology:

Access: (machine translated)

Either from Mittenwald or Seefeld/Tyrol to Leutasch in the valley of the same name. From there along the Leutascher Ache upstream in a westerly direction to the hamlet of Klamm (about 2km). 400 m further on we come to the bridge over the Klammbach. Turn right before the bridge. We drive slightly uphill and park the car after 180 m at the edge of a larger open space.

Approach: (machine translated)

We take the dirt road that leads us uphill in a northerly direction (signposts: "Wetterstein Hütte, Wang Alm, Puittal, Gehrenspitze"). We reach a hill, go downhill on the other side to a bridge and enter the stream a little below it.

Tour: (machine translated)

A nice canyon hike follows with some minor rappels and a few downclimbs.

Return: (machine translated)

At the exit of the gorge, take the path out over the steps to the left, past the wooden hut back to the parking lot.
