Summary: (machine translated)
Dry ravine in the Cabriel area. Among its sharp ridges we will find this simple descent in a beautiful place.

Hydrology: (machine translated)
Yes, in most of the route

Access: (machine translated)
Situating us in Villargordo de Cabriel on the old NIII we will go towards the village of Contreras, at the foot of the dam of the reservoir. On the orographic right we will have a paved road that goes down to the river, just before entering the private estate we can park the car back.
With the access car we return to the CV4661, we go up to the village of Contreras and continue along the road until we pass some curves and get almost up, in a sharp left curve, on the right we will have a small esplanade and a forest track that gives access to the path of the Cuchillos de Contreras, here we park the access car.

Approach: (machine translated)
From the access parking we will descend to the dry riverbed by the obvious path. We will follow the dry riverbed for more than a kilometer until the head of the first rappel, just before reaching the cuchillar.

Tour: (machine translated)
4 obligatory rappels and a couple of them climbable in an enviable environment that takes us down to the Cabriel.

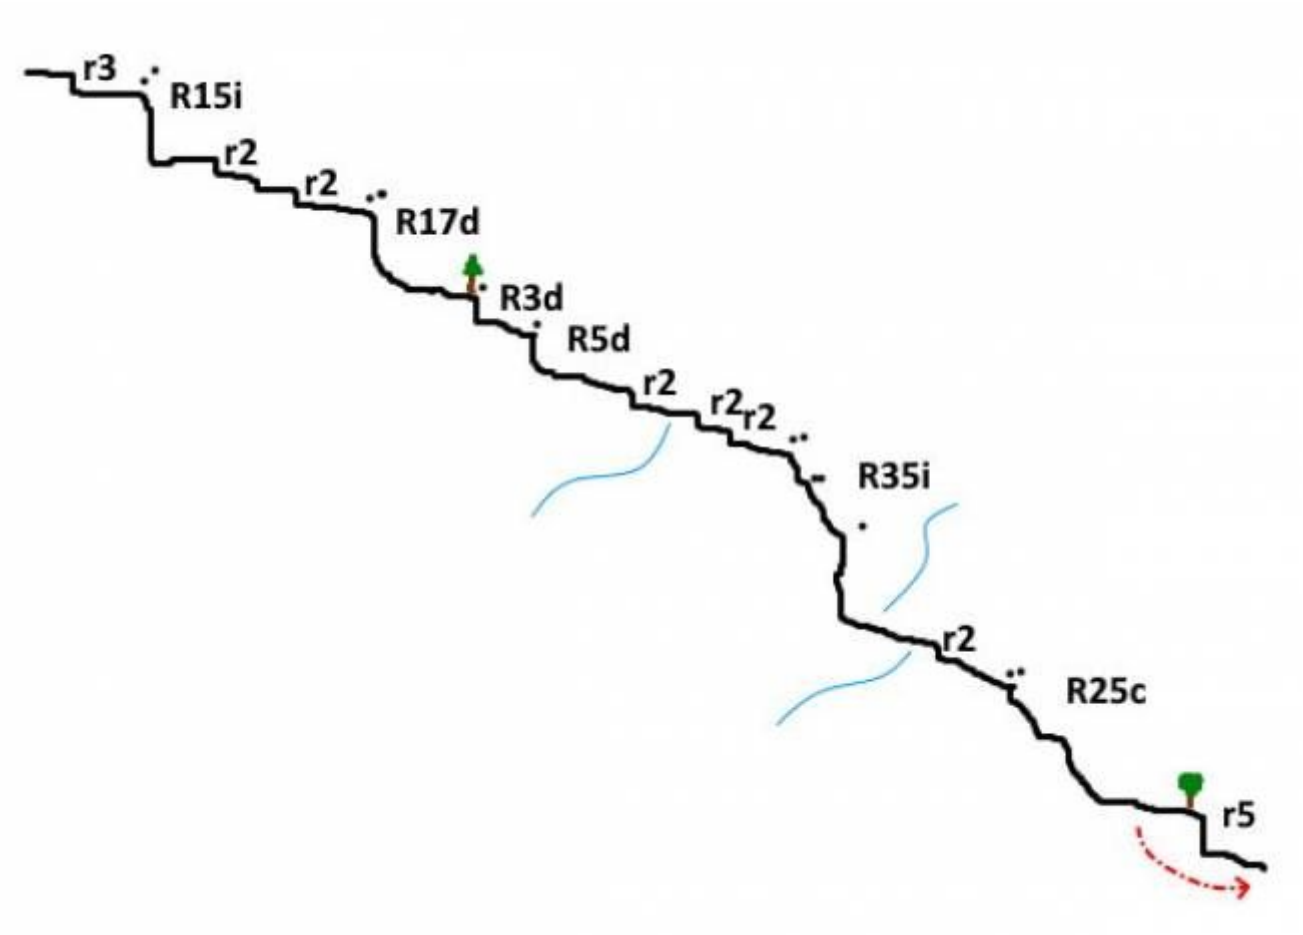

Return: (machine translated)
We will leave to the right by a path that leads us to the river.
We will find an iron bridge where we will cross the Cabriel.
Attention because the bridge has no board: it crosses like a via ferrata, there is room to support feet and hands all the way.
We will follow the track along the orographic right of the Cabriel to the hydroelectric plant.
If we have two cars we will follow it to the place where we have parked.
If we only have the access car, we will cross the gauging station and go to take the track that goes up through La Peraleja until we almost reach the road. Here we will see another track that crosses us and that we will take to the right and takes us to the curve of the road where we parked.
