Ropes: 2x30

Summary: (machine translated)
Pure rappel tour in a forest canyon with many short rappels at low heights.
The highlight is the last rappel with 20m and some special features.

Hydrology: (machine translated)
This is a tour with a relatively low water flow, but with some tributaries, which can possibly lead to a significant rise in water levels if there is a lot of rainfall.

Access: (machine translated)
We drive from Kössen in the direction of Kirchdorf in Tirol. Approx. 100m before the Elfi Alm is the Hasenaueralm parking lot at the edge of the road, where we can park our car free of charge.

Approach: (machine translated)
We follow the hiking trail in the direction of Hasenauer Alm until we cross the stream after about 30 minutes.

Tour: (machine translated)
This is a rappel tour in a forest canyon with many short rappels with low heights and slippery ground and some dead wood.
The highlight is the last rappel with 20m and an "infinity pool" at the start and a 2m jump at the exit of the rappel.

Return: (machine translated)
After the last rappel, we orographically climb out of the stream to the right and walk across the meadows to the Bäcken-Alm. From there, we follow the forest road to the main road, where we can already see our vehicle on the right-hand side

Anchoring strange, once double anchor once thin tree. Superiore canyon in the off-season. 20m rappel very nice! (machine translated)

All anchors ok, tour with great water level. New chain anchor at the first high rappel. In the first part of the canyon a lot of dead wood but not very disturbing. (machine translated)
