Summary: (machine translated)
Also known as Arroyo de la Quebrantaherradura, it is a simple ravine, generally dry or with a trickle of water except in the rainy season. Caution with the flow of the Tagus that part of the return is made by a narrow

Hydrology: (machine translated)
Until almost the end

Access: (machine translated)
By the CM210 that goes from Molina de Aragón almost to Cuenca, crossing the Alto Tajo in an area of great ecological value. When we reach Beteta we will turn off towards Masegosa on the CM-2201 and follow it until we reach the Peralejos de las Truchas CM-2106 turnoff (turn left).
We will follow this road to Peralejos, where we will enter the village. From the church we leave Cerrillo street and at the end of it the Camino del Albergue towards the Ermita de la Ribagorda, once we leave the village the road becomes a track, when we arrive at the Ermita we will park.

Approach: (machine translated)
From the Ermita there is a track parallel to the stream that goes down to a dam.

Tour: (machine translated)
From the dam a fairly open descent until almost the cut over the Tajo, where it closes a little and reaches some entity the descent.

Return: (machine translated)
When we reach the Tajo, we will go to the right up to the straits and after passing them, soon after, there is a path on our right that goes up to an old track that will take us to the Ermita.
