Specialities:

Gear:

Summary: (machine translated)
Easy descent to initiate people in canyoning with rappels of up to 15m in its final gorge. Comfortable access, fast return and beautiful and well formed narrows. If we catch it after rains with water we will be able to enjoy a great canyon.

Hydrology: (machine translated)
In the open areas on the left towards the access trail

Access: (machine translated)
On the N260 between Pobla de Segur and Pont de Suert just before the tunnel we have the detour to the left to Erinyá 1.5km and Serradell 6km. We will go through here passing these two beautiful villages.
After passing Serradell, after almost 1km the road turns back and straight ahead there is a track that climbs towards the ravine, the climbing areas and the Cova Cuberes. We will follow it (be careful because not every year the road is repaired and it can be in bad condition). It is about 2kms of track to a small esplanade, if we see that the car skates we can park further down in one of the adjacent roads without disturbing the passage.

Approach: (machine translated)
From the parking lot we will continue along the track, we will see a painted stone on which indicate the way, we will cross a generally dry stream and leave a detour to the left. We will go up our ravine until we find a path that leads us down (we will leave the first part) or continue straight ahead and enter the first narrow

Tour: (machine translated)
Three very well formed narrows, the first one is very short and the shallowest is saved with a rappel and a few skills. We pass an open area and arrive at the next strait, the longest.
After it again opens to reach the third strait where we have the two longest rappels.

Return: (machine translated)
After the last rappel, the third strait opens and we go out to the left on a small path that gets lost, there are some milestones but they are not necessary, we have to cross the stream and climb the slope where we have parked.
