Summary: (machine translated)
Natural division between Tacoronte and El Sauzal, this spectacular ravine with magnificent views and a peculiar return, will not leave us indifferent.
Obligatory combination of vehicles for the return from Mesa del Mar.
The access is difficult to reach unless the owner of the property agrees to let us pass through it, it would be good to approach previously to request permission or look for an alternative access. Also the descent can only be completed at low tide, otherwise the return would be crazy.

Hydrology:
No

Access: (machine translated)
Locating us in Tacoronte
Bcos Tacoronte area
We will go NW direction by the TF165 to Guayonje, we will pass it and we will continue until Mesa del Mar, where we will turn off to go down to the parking lots of the beach, here we will leave the return vehicle.
With the access vehicle we go back to Guajonye and from there to Tacoronte, just at the entrance we turn right to the parish of Sta Catalina, we will pass by the cemetery and continue straight on Toscas street until a traffic circle where Barranco Martiño street comes out. In this street, after the intersection with the street El Mocán, we park.

Approach: (machine translated)
Access bcos Guayonje-Mesa del Mar
Here the track goes down to the farm, asking for permission we can cross to the R1, otherwise we would have to look for an alternative way.

Tour:
Ver topo

Return: (machine translated)
After the last rappel, at low tide, we have a beautiful black sand beach. We will walk to the right along this beach to an area of cliffs where we will have to make a couple of climbs and skills, some of them equipped with fixed rope. It would not hurt to carry pieces of rope to be able to replace it.
We will continue walking to reach the confluence with the Guayonje river, from here it is the same return to Mesa del Mar.
