Specialities:

Gear:

Summary: (machine translated)
Long descent in a grassy and leafy environment. Lots of climbing and a 40m waterfall. Not one of the best in the area

Hydrology: (machine translated)
Gully with escapes but quite compromised. It is very little frequented so it is better to warn if you are going to do it because no one may pass through there all day.

Access: (machine translated)
From Tarascon-sur-Ariège on the N20, take the detour on the D8 to Vicdessos-Auzat. Just before reaching Auzat we turn right onto the D8b to Saleix. We continue, if possible, on the track that follows and when we reach a sharp bend on the right we park.

Approach: (machine translated)
Follow the path towards the pass of Crouzette (marked in yellow) to the pass where we take a path that leads down to the stream and leave the hut to one side.

Tour: (machine translated)
The first rappels can be climbed, although with the slipperiness of the rock it is better to be sure. We will arrive to a chaos where we have the big 40m waterfall with an intermediate split.

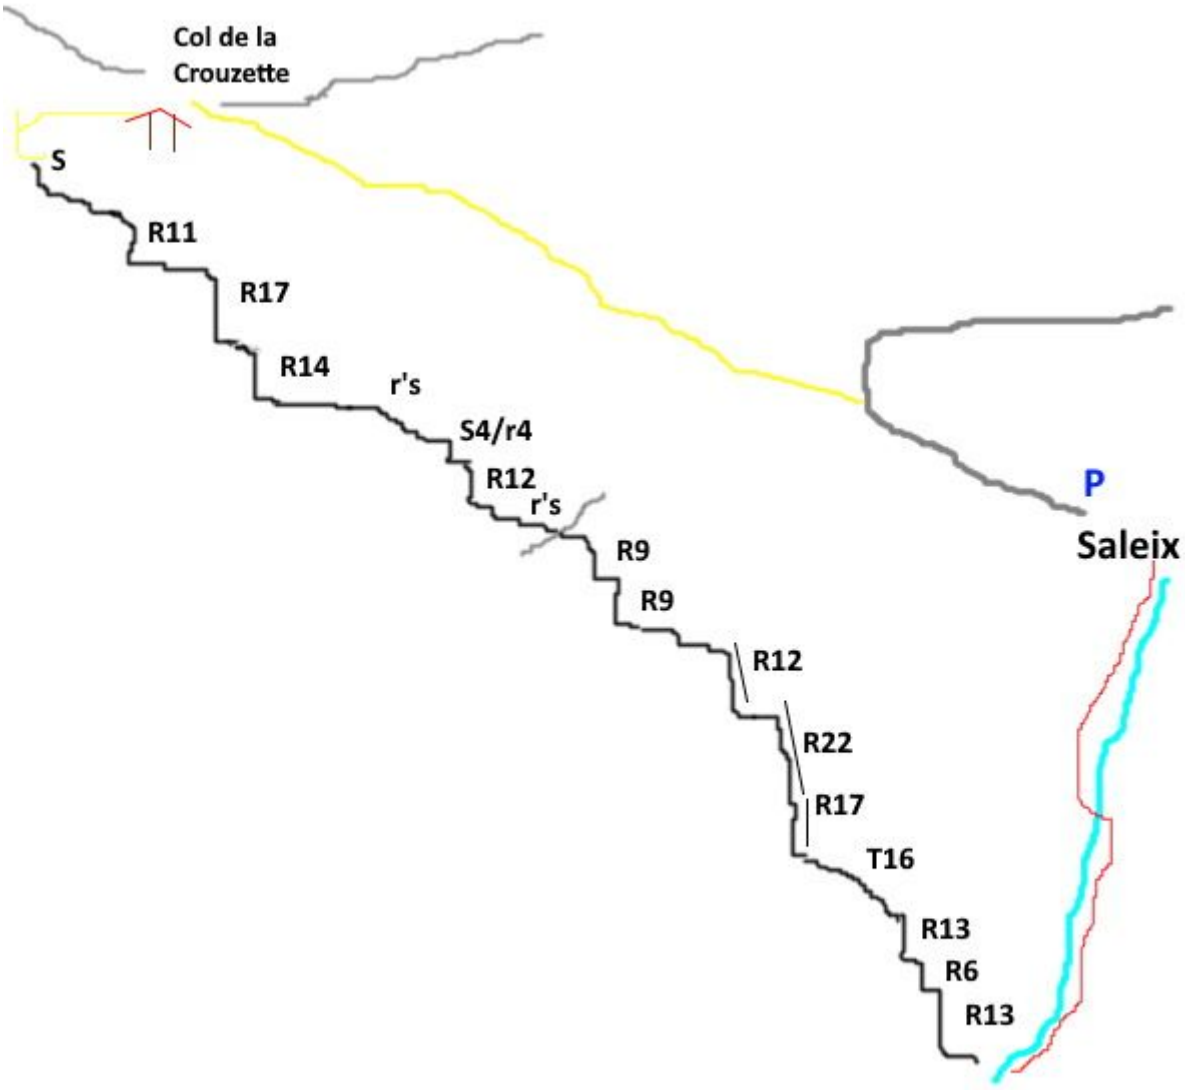

Return: (machine translated)
We go out on the right bank to a little marked path next to the river and after a while we will see another path to the left of the river, this time clearer. We cross again and follow it to the Judzé bridge, from here a path leads us to the cars.
