Summary: (machine translated)
One of those little jewels of the French Pyrenees, short, intense and very beautiful.

Hydrology: (machine translated)
In several areas, on the right to the return trail

Access: (machine translated)
Situating ourselves on the Col de Larrau (D26 or NA 2011) between Spain and France.
We descend to the French side until the col of Erroymendi. Here there is a track on the right and in this esplanade on the right, we reach a farm that we leave aside and continue down the track to a small esplanade next to the river where we will park.
To get here we will need a high car, if we don't have it we can park further up the hill.

Approach: (machine translated)
Along the path that goes on the orographic left until we reach a small bridge that crosses us, shortly after the bridge we reach an equipped jump, the first rappel and access to the ravine.

Tour: (machine translated)
Short, well-formed, beautiful, with little equipment and a superb R25.

Return: (machine translated)
When we reach the dam, we leave to the right to take a path that ascends along the river to the parking area.
