Summary: (machine translated)
Unsurpassable dry canyon, a first part with short rappels, a dodge with handrail that can be recovered on the left to bypass a pond to get to the most flooded area that leads us to the part that gives the canyon its name, an impressive wall to rappel, 22 meters deep into a dry pond, handrail with chain on the right, then from the water pool 16 m on the right and finally almost 30 m to the brambles.

Hydrology:

Access: (machine translated)
We take the N-2 until the second exit Collbató (575). Then we continue on the secondary road to the "Bruc Residencial", where we take the first road (Can Marques) up until we reach a path on the right towards "Rest. Vinya Nova" on the right. Once we reach the restaurant, we follow the path to the left until we reach the Can Jorba farmhouse, where we will park.

Approach: (machine translated)
We follow the path on foot further uphill to the left of the farmhouse until we reach a path on the right marked with red markings (easy to miss, watch out!). Once we are on the path (which is not very easy to see in some places), we follow it further uphill until the ascent flattens out and leads down to the streambed.

Tour: (machine translated)
Easy descent with many climbing passages and counter-movements, some hollows filled with "dubious" water at the exit of some abseils, which can always be bypassed with a little skill or by attaching handrails. The abseils are generally short until the end of the descent, where we find the longest, the last of which is 30 meters long with a flying end.

Please be particularly careful with the salamanders in the first part of the canyon

Return: (machine translated)
We follow the path below the climbing routes to the right of the stream until we reach the farmhouse where we parked the car.

Used as a descent after the ascent of the Aguilas de Can Jorba. Some sections are difficult as it is narrow. The last rappel that leads directly over the large grotto at the foot of the wall is beautiful. (machine translated)
