Summary: (machine translated)
Simple and short canyon with only one notable difficulty, the waterfall of 60m divided into 30m, the rest is relatively simple. In winter we can find it with snow / ice, it is also a very windy area so it can be very uncomfortable. In summer, on the other hand, it usually dries out.

Hydrology: (machine translated)
At all times, very open

Access: (machine translated)
We will have to be located in Arouca, in the province of Aveiro.
From here we head towards Moldes on the CM1251 and follow this road south through Bustelo, Adaufe/Espinheiro and the next river is the Coto Boi.
Here at the bridge we have a track where we can leave the car to return if we want to do the whole riverbed.
We continue up the road until we see the waterfall on our right, when we are in front of the wind turbine we park the access car.

Approach: (machine translated)
There is a small path but you can't get lost, we just have to follow straight ahead to the top of the waterfall, you can't get lost because you can see the access.

Tour:
Ver topo

Return: (machine translated)
Then we can either exit to the right up the slope to the car or continue on and do one more climb/rappel to reach the road bridge.
