Summary: (machine translated)
Short but quite beautiful, varied gorge with rappels, slides and possible jumps in an open environment.
*Unfortunately closed since February 2013, see notes.

Hydrology:

Access: (machine translated)
Turn off the B25 into the Steinbach valley and drive to the exit of the public road at the Steinbach hunting lodge.

Approach: (machine translated)
Hike along the sand road for about 2.5 km to Windischbachau at the head of the valley.
Cross the Alplbach stream and follow the marked hiking trail towards Tremel until you reach a forest road. Follow the forest road eastwards until you reach a hairpin bend. From here, descend to the stream on a forest road that is already overgrown again.

Tour: (machine translated)
The first rappel is 12m to the right over a tree. Then a series of pretty, currently unfortunately woody rappels with beautiful washouts in a low gorge leading to the highest rappel of the ditch. From a chain, it goes about 30m into the depths. Once in the main trench, there are 2 more abseiling points as well as various slides and possible jumps
Caution: Due to a tree entanglement, the abseiling chain at the 30m waterfall threatens to sink into the gravel. Be sure to take anchors and quickdraws with you.
