Summary: (machine translated)
Minor" ravine of the Karranza valley, so much quality and quantity in the Calera river has dwarfed these other ravines. Without great verticals but with a very remarkable grassy environment, quite well configured and above all solitary, like its neighbors Baulaya East and Chorra Grande, it is a highly recommended option in rainy seasons when it gains much interest. In summer they carry a trickle of water

Hydrology:
Sí

Access: (machine translated)
We arrive at Lanestosa by the N629 and from here by the BI3622 to Karranza. Or from Bárcena by the CA120.
We will go up to Lanzas Agudas by the BI4625 and we will follow the track that comes out at the top of the village, we will take another track that comes out on the left until we can get there by car.

Approach: (machine translated)
Chorra Grande, Baulaya East and West Banks
We have two options, in both we will enjoy the beech forests that we have at the foot of Balgerri:
* We will continue along the track to the exit of the ravine and climb through the forest.
* Another option is to climb the Portillo de Brena and Balgerri and then go to our riverbed.

Tour: (machine translated)
Very grassy, somewhat channeled and slippery, all the rappels from natural

Return: (machine translated)
When we reach the track, we take it to the left.

Coordinates:
Canyon Start 43.1803 -3.3606
