Specialities:

Gear:

Summary: (machine translated)
Short ravine at the foot of the Guadalhorce reservoir, with very comfortable approach and return and that with water you can enjoy a lot. From the parking lot you can see whether or not it has flow.

Hydrology: (machine translated)
Not possible

Access: (machine translated)
From Antequera towards Valle de Abdalajís on the A343. Around pk 25 turn off to the Guadalhorce reservoir. We continue until a left-right crossroads where we have to continue to the left towards the reservoir. After 500m there is a small bridge and after 500m there is a track on the left where we park. From here we see the final part of the descent and see if it carries water.

Approach: (machine translated)
Along the track where we parked we climb above the quarry. After passing it, there is a path to the right that takes us to the head of the quarry.

Tour: (machine translated)
Small initial skills to enter the rappel zone with a marmite in the first one, which is normally dry.

Return: (machine translated)
