Gear:

Summary: (machine translated)
Simple canyon to initiate in canyoning. Without great difficulties and generally without water except for heavy rains.

Hydrology: (machine translated)
They are not necessary but it would be quite complicated due to the orography of the area.

Access: (machine translated)
We must be located in Cirat, on the CV20, direction Onda. At pk 39.8 we will find a track on our left. We get into it. In just over a kilometer we will have a sharp left turn. Here we leave the car of return.
We continue by the track, about two kilometers until some ruins (they are to the right), from where a track leaves to the right. Here we leave the access car.

Approach: (machine translated)
From the return parking we will have to walk up the track to the ruins.
On the track that comes out on the right at the ruins we continue until we find the riverbed.

Tour: (machine translated)
Canyon of simple rappels and some dexterity. If we manage to do it with water we can enjoy a good time.

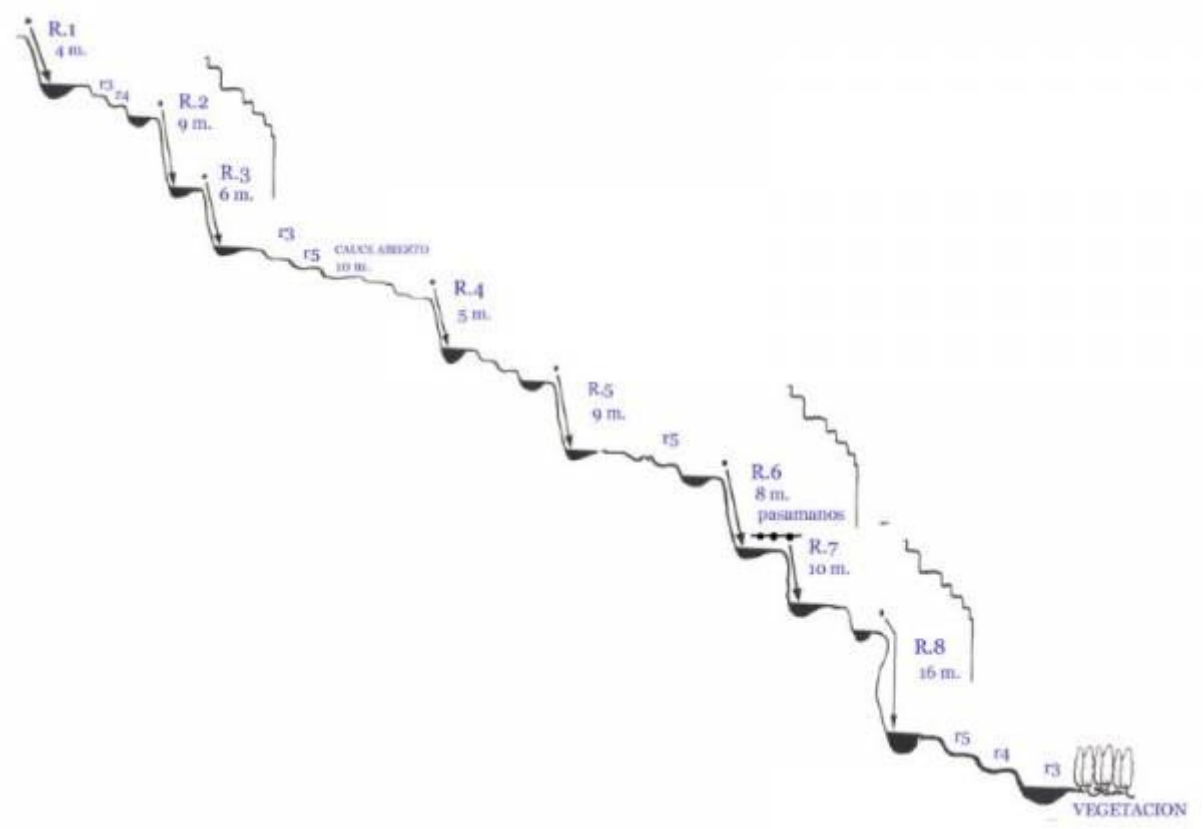

Return: (machine translated)
After the last rappel, there are a couple of cliffs, but it is better to go to the right through a small climb and, without losing height, go halfway up the slope in search of a path that leads to the car.
