Summary: (machine translated)
Generally dry ravine, although with pools, the last one practically unavoidable. It can be combined with the Rosella ravine, they have the same approach and the same return. Short and with an easy final section.

Hydrology: (machine translated)
The entire route is an open riverbed, except for the vertical.

Access: (machine translated)
We will have to get to the village of Portell de Morella.
From Morella by the CV125. When we get to Portell we get into the village and after passing a farm we turn left. At 70 we will see a track on the left with SL trail markers (white and green) where we will park. There is room for several cars.

Approach: (machine translated)
Access Bcos Rosella and Toll d'En Drac
We go along the path and after half an hour, we go down to the Rosella ravine and cross it. We continue along a slope seeing at all times the Toll d'En Drac down to our left, until we enter the riverbed.

Tour: (machine translated)
Simple, short, with a fractionated end where 2 people fit. It usually has pools with stagnant water, and when it rains it is activated immediately.

Return: (machine translated)
Just after the last rappel, take the SL trail, which is the same as before, cross the Rosella again, until you reach the top, and straight back to the starting point.
