Summary: (machine translated)
Simple open ravine at the top and more boxed when it loses height. In summer without water, you can make a combination of cars but given how long it takes and the beautiful surroundings, we believe it is better to walk up the path of access.

Hydrology: (machine translated)
Yes, although overdressed

Access: (machine translated)
We are located in Cangas de Onís.
If we have access car we must go up to Següenco, where we can park, or if we have high car follow the track at the end of the village. There we will have a fork Payares to the right and to the left our track to the pass over the Requexau where we will park.
With the return car, or if we only have one, we will go up towards Covadonga to La Riera where we will park.

Approach: (machine translated)
From the pass we will have to go down to the riverbed as best we can.
From the village by the path that goes up the orographic right of the river, after passing under La Porra we will arrive at the Requexau and we will also go down to the riverbed.

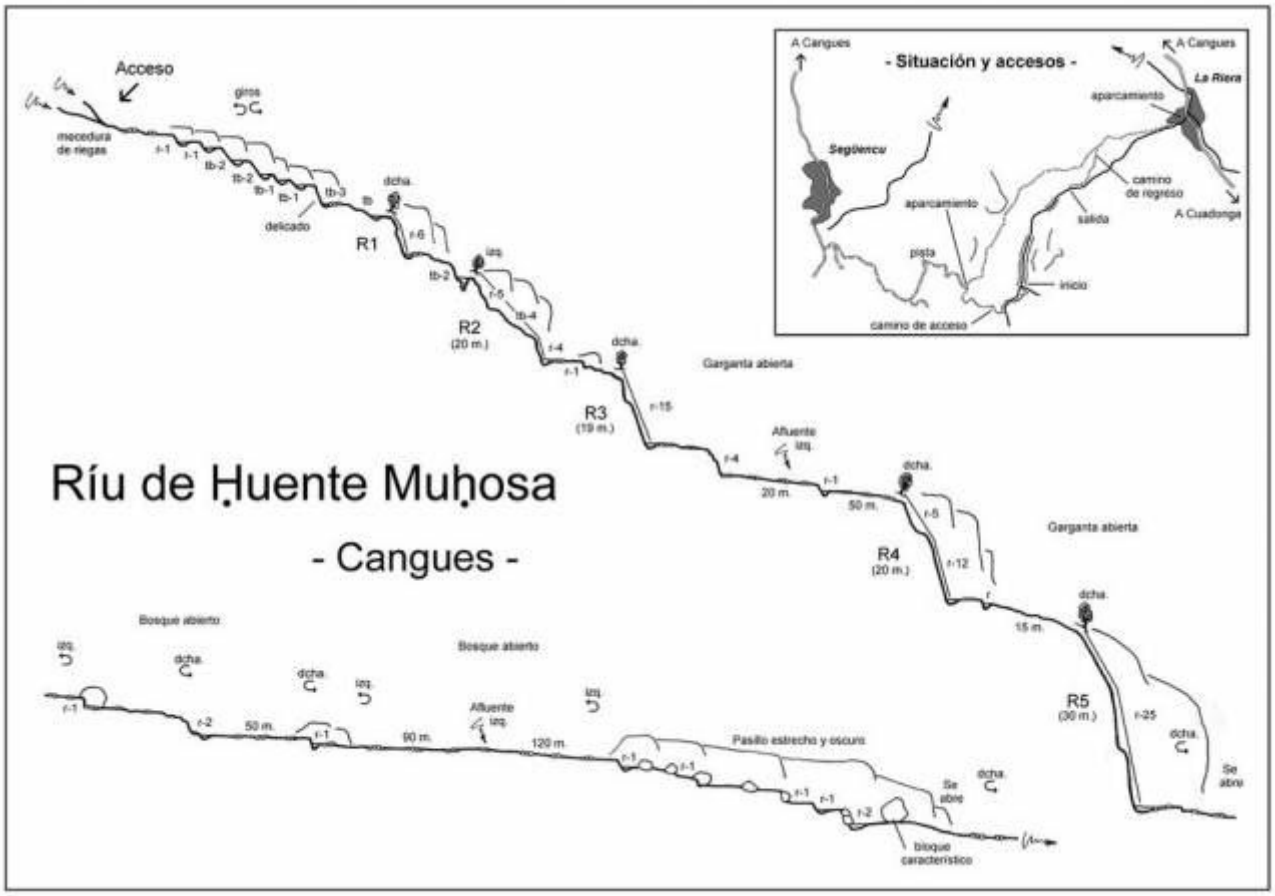

Tour:
Ver topo

Return: (machine translated)
When it opens, we exit to the left onto the access path.
