Summary: (machine translated)
O Maringo erreka, is a ravine in the Baztan valley, a stream in summer and a fast-flowing river after rain, which we will take into account to face our descent.
Open, with the possibility of avoiding most of the difficulties, very wooded, with a lush environment, a very long but very beautiful approach and an equally long development. If we opt for the combination of cars we will take off a good walk.
To complete

Hydrology: (machine translated)
Through the forest

Access: (machine translated)
On the N121-a between Pamplona and Irún.
Next to the Belate pass, going down towards Santesteban, we will arrive at Almandoz. If we go uphill, we will leave through Berroeta.
In both cases we will go to the regatta of Marin, by the orographic right there is a track that gets us to the hydroelectric plant. Here we park the car to return.
If we have access car we will go up towards the port (NA1210) until almost the pk 9, a few meters before we have a track on the left (we will have to check that we can pass) that goes up above the forest to the watershed, shortly after passing to the other side, we will find a place to park.

Approach: (machine translated)
Follow track so as not to get lost among the large number of trails

Tour:

Return: (machine translated)
Follow the stream to the dam, exit to the right following the canalization, when you reach the pipe, go down the path to the side to the power plant.
