Specialities:

Gear:

Summary: (machine translated)
A technically demanding descent if the water flow is sufficient. The last waterfall (57m) has a full jet, at least for the first one.

Hydrology:

Access: (machine translated)
From St. André on the D48 to Salazie. Continue for 2km in the direction of Hellbourg, then turn right onto the D52 in the direction of Grand Ilet. A good 10 km after turning onto the D52, we cross the Rivière des Fleurs Jaunes. After the bridge, we park our car for the exit. (see google sketch approach)\n\nWith the second car, we now drive another 4 km up to Grand Ilet and from there - first in a northerly direction to Mare Martin and from there to Bé Cabot les Bas. There we look for a place for the car where it won't get in the way. Transfer distance 12.8 km. (see google map conversion)

Approach: (machine translated)
We continue to the exit of the road and take the footpath that leads to the bridge. We cross it and - now on the orographic right bank of the stream - look for access to the streambed.

Tour: (machine translated) see topographic view and video

Return: (machine translated)
Once in the Rivière des Fleurs Jaunes, walk up the riverbed (regardless of the bank). After a good 2 km we walk under a pedestrian suspension bridge, 400m further on the Ravine Blanche à Jacquot flows in from the right (orographic left). We keep left (orographic right) and stay in the Rivière des Fleurs Jaunes. After another 400m, we look for a clear path on the orographic left bank (about 645m old) that leads to the road bridge where we parked the lower car. (see sketch on map)
