Specialities:

Gear:

Summary: (machine translated)
Best known for its caves, Cueva de las Palomas and Cueva del Turche, which can be visited along the way. Nice descent although with a lot of undergrowth in some sections.
Descent not recommended after the DANA (15.01.2025):

Hydrology: (machine translated)
Yes, just before the Turche cave there is a trail.
In the middle of the ravine too.

Access: (machine translated)
We must be located in Buñol.
We leave by the CV427 towards Yatová and in a left curve at pk 2 we have a perpendicular street on our left, we will take it and park at the end on the track the access car.
The return car by the CV425 direction Alborache, just after crossing the bridge over the river we have a detour to the right to the parking lot, indicated as Cueva del Turche.

Approach: (machine translated)
From the car access is almost immediate, from the track we will see the riverbed on the left, we just have to go to it.
From the Turche parking lot you have to go up the river following the trails on both sides.

Tour: (machine translated)
Nice waterfalls of tuff in the cave areas that, in spring or after rains, can have water, combined with uninteresting stretches and lots of undergrowth that we will have to avoid.
Obligatory last rappel through the cave!

Return: (machine translated)
It leads to the cave of Turche, the exit is immediate to the cars.
