Summary: (machine translated)
Raw data import from Ropewiki https://ropewiki.com/Torrent_des_Riz

Would be a nice canyon for beginners if it wasn't full of trees, because there hasn't been any major flooding here for at least 20 years. (machine translated)

Hydrology: (machine translated)
Limestone, very rarely flooded, which is why dead wood is everywhere in the canyon.

Access: (machine translated)
At the Tine de Montbovon bridge, turn off onto the small road and then park immediately after crossing the Torrent des Riz.

Approach: (machine translated)
The hiking trail leads fairly directly up to the start.

Tour: (machine translated)
Right by the forest path at the top is a stupid downclimb that has also been set up. After that you walk for a while, the canyoning part is relatively short, at the exit you walk again for 15 minutes.

Return: (machine translated)
Go straight to the car at the small bridge.

Coordinates:
Canyon Start 46.4604 7.0494
Parking at Entry 46.4645 7.0530

Still a lot of wood and slippery. But hey, at least it's another creek you can do to avoid always seeing the same canyons. (machine translated)
