Summary: (machine translated)

Raw data import from Ropewiki https://ropewiki.com/Torrent_des_Riz

Would be a nice canyon for beginners if it wasn't full of trees, because there hasn't been any major flooding here for at least 20 years. (machine translated)

Hydrology: (machine translated)

Limestone, very rarely flooded, which is why dead wood is everywhere in the canyon.

Access: (machine translated)

At the Tine de Montbovon bridge, turn off onto the small road and then park immediately after crossing the Torrent des Riz.

Approach: (machine translated)

The hiking trail leads fairly directly up to the start.

Tour: (machine translated)

Right by the forest path at the top is a stupid downclimb that has also been set up. After that you walk for a while, the canyoning part is relatively short, at the exit you walk again for 15 minutes.

Return: (machine translated)

Go straight to the car at the small bridge.

Still a lot of wood and slippery. But hey, at least it's another creek you can do to avoid always seeing the same canyons. (machine translated)
