Specialities:

Gear:

Summary: (machine translated)

Watery rappel canyon

Hydrology:

Access: (machine translated)

From the direction of Turin into the Valle d'Aosta. Pass the town of Aosta and continue towards the Mont Blanc tunnel. Then leave the highway and go to Morgex. There park the car for the exit directly at the Torrente di Licony (P2 - see maps). With the second car up to Morge to the parking lot P1 (1640m H&#246;he - see maps).

Approach: (machine translated)

From P1 to E. (upper and &#252;blicher entry at 1620m H&#246;he)\naccording to the map 2 it seems m&#246;glich to enter directly at the Br&#252;ckenreste before the beginning of the narrowing: "E2" at about 1480m H&#246;he (Geuna/Ruotolo draw here in the sketch of their book an exit m&#246;glichkeit). So k&#246;nnte one could save at least 45 min. Bachhatscher. The question is whether the old path to the dilapidated bridge can still be found without problems (see entry in map 2).

Tour: (machine translated)

About 12 rappel. After the m&#252;ndung of the Colomba into the Torrente Licony, the water flow can increase significantly. Towards the exit of the tour &#246;the canyon opens up and there are longer runs to do. Exit then onto the road that runs along the right above the stream (995m H&#246;he).

Return: (machine translated)

From the stream directly to the car.
