Gear:

Summary: (machine translated)
In the same valley as the Rejía, which allows us to combine the two canyons on the same day. Descent to be done after rains so that it is not dry, the end of the canyon is the confluence with Rejía and therefore the Charco waterfall.

Hydrology: (machine translated)
Some at mid-slope

Access: (machine translated)
We must get to Tolox, we will approach by the A366 and then the A7250.
Once in the village we look for the spa, here we leave the car back.
We take the road of the natural park of Las Nieves that goes up the hillside. Soon it becomes a dirt road in good condition. We follow the "Sendero de la Rejía" to the Fuente del Agua where we leave the car.
From the Altamadillas pass, the first game cutter takes us down to Horcajuelos and the second to Rejía.

Approach: (machine translated)
Approach and returns Rejia and Horcajuelos
We go down the first firebreak and at the end we continue along the slope to the entrance to the ravine.

Tour: (machine translated)
A few first drops lead us to the 40m waterfall. Be careful, it is quite slippery.
After crossing to the right with the Rejía we arrive at the 18m Charco de la Virgen where the descent ends.

Return: (machine translated)
We can leave by the irrigation ditch on the left and go down to the spa or go up the firebreak on the right for almost 600m of slope to the track where the car is.
