Summary: (machine translated)
For some it is a canyon for collectors, for others a different canyon for the spring. In any case it is a canyon to be done after rains to ensure good flow and enjoyment because the approach is long and tedious, yes, in a natural environment not negligible.
Access can be greatly reduced (one hour) if we go up in a high car to the Xalet de Catllaràs.
In our opinion, if you are going to do it in spring or autumn and carry water, perfect. In the rest of cases it is better not to do it.

Hydrology: (machine translated)
Yes, it only has small fattened areas

Access: (machine translated)
On the C16 we will be located in Guardiola de Bergedà, here we turn right onto the B402 to La Pobla de Lillet. Once past La Pobla and pk. 11 we have the detour to the right to the Monestir de Sta Maria de Lillet, we will pass the monastery and continue along the track up the Junyent. After 3 kilometers the track separates from the stream turning right in a sharp bend. We will park here.
If we want to combine cars we will have to go to the Xalet de Catllarás with the access vehicle.

Approach: (machine translated)
We will follow the track to go up to the ruins of Junyent, when we arrive we will follow this track that goes to Arderiu and from there to the pass, site where we cross with the track of the Xalet de Catllarás (from here it is common for both).
We will go to the left, to the south, leaving this track to go to the pass of Ardericó and almost to the cabin of Ardericó, where we leave the track to get into the stream Rec de la Plana or torrent de l'Ardericó. From here we will only have to follow the stream in an easterly direction.
There is the possibility of following the track up to the Teulería de Monclús by the top of the valley and from here down the entire stream.
