Resumen: (traducción alternativa) The Trou Blanc is also a scenic aqualand, but should not be underestimated in terms of the dangers associated with high water flow (especially backflow below the slides). The entry via the 50m rock face offers a challenging vertical component, which is indicated when there is a lot of water flow.
Hidrología:
Acceso: (traducción alternativa) From St-Andre on the D 48 via Salazie to Hell-Bourg (25 km). From here (950 m above sea level) take the D 48 to Illet à Vidot and continue to the exit of the road. Park your vehicle here (700 m above sea level).
Acceso: (traducción alternativa) From the vehicle parked at the exit, return 100m to the last fork and now follow the signpost 'source petrifiante/Trou Blanc' on the "GR R 1 variant", crossing the slopes high above the Riviere du Mat. Before reaching the houses of Trou Blanc, there are 2 access options at a cross on the side of the path: Either descend to the right and then follow the path turning left to the entry at 'R1-bis' over a 50 m high vertical rock face with a transfer in the vertical (10/40 - hanging!). Or go straight on to the houses, then take the path branching off to the right down to the Rivier du Mat, where you come to the rappel 'R1' after approx. 300 m in the streambed. The highest rappel in this case is 18m, provided you stay in the streambed. The choice of access depends on whether the water flow allows an ascent of the attractive narrow section following R1. In case of doubt, the local guides recommend access via 'R1-bis' and usually do this themselves.
Recorrido: (traducción alternativa) After the approach in the off. First an attractive narrow section, followed by slides and possible jumps, interrupted by a few rappels. There are several bypasses, one of which involves a 35m rappel.  A topographic view is available at FFME (see links).
Regreso: (traducción alternativa) Immediately before the suspension bridge, get off on the right and walk up the path leading from the suspension bridge on the right to the parked vehicle.

The upper part was unfortunately destroyed by a rockfall. You now enter about 10m before the crossroads at the access (40m rappel just before the first emergency exit). The approach time in the description is not correct. Normal ascent time is 30-40 minutes. Tour itself top! Pools all very deep and almost all places can be repeated several times (ropes available for climbing up). Partly very slippery places (traducción alternativa)
