Résumé: (traduction alternative) O barranco del Molino, is a spectacular dry canyon with magnificent views and a peculiar return, which will not leave us indifferent. It is a technical descent, with fractions, narrow ledges, exposed headers, large vertical and no loopholes, that is, only for very experienced people. Obligatory combination of vehicles for the return from Mesa del Mar. Access is through private farms. Also the descent can only be completed at low tide, otherwise the return would be crazy.
Hydrologie: No
Accès: (traduction alternative) Locating us in Tacoronte Bcos Tacoronte area We will go NW direction by the TF165 to Guayonje, we will pass it and we will continue until Mesa del Mar, where we will turn off to go down to the parking lots of the beach, here we will leave the return vehicle. With the access vehicle we backtrack to Guajonye and from there to Tacoronte, just at the entrance we turn right to the parish of Sta Catalina, we pass the cemetery and continue straight ahead the Toscas street and El Calvario street, where we have on the right the hermitage. Here we park
Approche: (traduction alternative) Access bcos Guayonje-Mesa del Mar By the street of the Ermita until the track where we will continue until a farm at the foot of the cliff where the ravine begins.
Tour: Ver topo
Retour: (traduction alternative) After the last rappel, at low tide, we have a beautiful black sand beach. We will walk to the right along this beach to an area of cliffs where we will have to make a couple of climbs and skills, some of them equipped with fixed rope. It would not hurt to carry pieces of rope to be able to replace it. We will continue walking to reach the confluence with the Guayonje river, from here it is the same return to Mesa del Mar.
