Résumé: (traduction alternative) A ravine with little entity that people usually do when the rest of the ravines in the area are very loaded. Its access with two cars is immediate and with only one car is by a path that in an hour at most leaves you at the head of the canyon.
Hydrologie: (traduction alternative) Possible in several areas along the trail that crosses the creek.
Accès: (traduction alternative) We will go to Broto by the N260 from Sabiñánigo through Biescas or Fiscal. Also the N260 from Ainsa
Approche: (traduction alternative) At the exit of Broto on the north side we have the detour to Oto, next to the waterfall and the Sorrosal river. We will arrive at Oto and after leaving aside the campsite we will continue straight ahead along the track next to the Ara river. Just in front of Sarvisé the ravine flows into the Ara, this is the point to park. If we have two cars (option to investigate) we would have to see if the track that leaves from the camping Oto by the slope of the mountain is passable in vehicle, in which case the access would be immediate.
Tour: (traduction alternative) Dry canyon except after rains, it is quite open and has a couple of nice areas.
Retour: (traduction alternative) After the last rappel we can take a path to the right to a track that leads us to the access road. We can also continue walking a few more meters to take a path to the left that leads us directly to the track Oto
