Specialità:
Attrezzatura:
Sintesi: (traduzione alternativa) Perhaps the best canyon in La Rioja, it has few rappels and a long approach and developments that can be shortened by doing only the part from the Ermita to the village. Spring is the ideal time to do it. Caution if you are loaded at the top of the canyon because then you will receive a lot of water.
Idrologia: (traduzione alternativa) On the bridges indicated. Outside these there are few other areas
Accesso: (traduzione alternativa) To get to Pedroso, take the A12 in Nájera and turn off onto the LR113 towards the south. We cross Nájera and continue to Bobadilla. Soon we will find a detour to the left to Pedroso on the LR434. Once in the village, just before arriving, there is a bridge over the river Pedroso that the road makes a zig-zag, if we continue straight ahead on the track that comes out, we leave the village on the left and soon we find a track on our left that goes down to the recreation area where people bathe in summer. Here we can leave the car to return. If we continue along the track for 4kms we will arrive at some switchbacks with a track on the left that leads to the Ermita. We can start from here or continue another kilometer to a bridge over the river Pedroso.
Avvicinamento: (traduzione alternativa) If we have gone up by car, the access is direct. If not, we will have to make the ascent on foot.
Giro: (traduzione alternativa) The descent has 3 parts, the first one from the bridge to the hermitage, which is a descent of steep slopes, cliffs, and footing. The second part, from the Hermitage, is the most interesting and sportive part. The river is accumulating water and finally we will have to work with the ropes and some jumps. The final part is quite a bit heavier with a lot of badinas and dexterity. The third part is dark and badinas. The three parts begin and end at bridges, so the descent can be shortened as much as necessary.
Ritorno: (traduzione alternativa) We arrive at the recreational area of the village. If we escape before we will have to undo the way up.
